Community content is available in CC-BY-SA unless otherwise stated. This is especially why I can't stand the idea of providing games with these services. They are entirely dependent on some corporate-hosted cloud services, and of course companies are known to insist on long-term support and temporary setbacks – oh wait, they lay off the gems, the people who made it, the gems in the game, which is nothing more than meteoric success, shutter ing studios and then find something else to ruin. Mind You King is the main crap of the late capitalist AAA gaming industry crap, so I don't expect anything less. Any game makes it all Money is unthinkable and unthinkable, in this case meeting expectations or being thrown into the trash with the livelihoods of at least a few hundred people in general for good measure, while the decision-makers are sailing in a golden parachute that ruins another good company that is ridiculous. But I answered your question, Digger:> Did they expect the game to last forever? Most casual gamers don't think about this stuff this way. Hell, there isn't much of a normal kind. It's a new shining thing and because everyone loves it and it's new and shiny, then let's play it for a while until a new glitter comes out, we'll all go play and forget how much money we'll make no matter how much money we sink into the old one.> As a game designer/community manager, what will one do to make the end of a beloved game (if bitter sweet) will be perceived in a somewhat positive? I won't. Instead of making as much money as possible, we were able to avoid creating games with longevity in mind and setting unrealistic goals, so we didn't have to quit the game, which accounts for a significant portion of the $200 million a year, so it's enough to keep our business reasonably large. Sorry if the bitterness here is strong. I'm passionate about things like this and I don't care how casual the game is, it obviously had a lot of fans, i was making a lot of money, but now it doesn't work because i quit and 78 people didn't have enough gold to put some ass somewhat under his wings high in the company. Everything is sad, stupid and unnecessary. Me too! And yes, it can not be downloaded because it is no longer available. Sometimes i just click on it to torture myself but can't find a server. The wang team had a plan for a new community, and I know the PM here had a gut feeling like me. Trust me they knew how much gutith I had. I couldn't even go and bring myself using jewelry to get as many pet stickers as I could. I did not go back from the date of the announcement. I didn't want to leave the pet I had. I'm hoping someone will capitalises on it and realize there's a market, funky bays are better in some ways, but better but never fixed pets and flaws are annoying. In their defence we picked up their little game swamp and they couldn't go along. I play and buy jewelry but it is a stop interval until it comes along with others better. I'm going to petition the game company, but I'm not sure where to start the roll. I am convinced that in a spirit of goodwill the king can sell the right. Sweet 1Love Haha Activision Blizzard is laying off hundreds of employees today, and part of the fallout will be the closure of the Kings Mobile Gaming Studio in Seattle, losing 78 jobs, according to anonymous sources. Activision Blizzard did not comment on specific layoffs, noting that 8% of employees would be fired primarily from non-developed positions. King, the maker of Candy Crush Saga, acquired Z2Live, which is responsible for iOS flight sim MetalStorm: online as well as the cartoon strategy game Battle Nation for mobile and PC, and acquired the studio for $45 million in 2015. Activision blizzard said it was focusing on its core franchise, so it was likely to be cut off. Paradise Bay, one of the studio's games, was a success. The studio has generated about $200 million in the past few years, but it is still closed. King's successful launch of the Candy Crush Friends saga resulted in 268 million monthly active users in the quarter and sequentialgrowth. Fourth-quarter revenue surged 5% year-over-year to $543 million, while operating profit increased 28% year-over-year to $270 million. King said Candy Crush Friends Saga saw strong revenue generation and retention trends, contributing to the growth of the Candy Crush franchise, which grew year-over-year net bookings and MAUs. The measurement company Sensor Tower estimated that the titles of Activision, Blizzard and King were worth about $511.3 million in the last quarter of the year worldwide in the App Store and Google Play. This was a 0.4% year-over-year decrease from q4 2017. King's title slate accounted for 92% of the total, and total spending is estimated at $461 million, up 0.1% year-over-year. Spending on the King Catalog was originally led by Candy Crush Saga, which brought in an estimated $234.5 million for the quarter, down about 3.5 percent year-on-year. Blizzard's Hearthstone surpassed Activision Blizzard's mobile game revenue of $40 million, matching player spend in 4Q17. Corrections, 2:57 p.m. Pacific: Kings Seattle Studios, as we first reported, generated about $200 million over the last few years, not 2018. The error has been fixed. I never understood why zoo islands didn't. So we can keep the animals there and make them easier to feed. Shame you give us useless gems when the game is closed in a month and it's a bit rude and i have everything to pull only a week after paying for premium animals ... Wow all companies have to sue for the breeze wind of trust and what name is hidden. Every lead should be ashamed of itself... There are no other games out there like this... Shame just throw all the work at your end as well as our away... Just a waste. Hawc post: 28 October 2018 6:26 pm Post Bee Hawc » Tue Mar 19, 2019 7:35 am This game is so loved. Why not sell it? A lot of sad people It's a true move and willing to sell to the company. I bought all of the premium animals. That quick money came and disappeared. It's so sad. Miss the game and miss people. It doesn't make sense. It's a great game!!!! It sells player Hawc. Level 80 play begins in October 2017. Back to gameplay discussions
